[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

[New] York, Oct. 2.—A merchant named Jackson, [illegible] on the East river front to-day laid [before] the police commissioners a letter which he [illegible] a determination on the part of a Utica [illegible] to assassinate Conkling. The letter expressed [the opinion] that Conkling deserved death, and the [illegible] he was coming to New York on the de[illegible] of the state convention next Wednesday, and [illegible] should not be admitted, be the consequences what they might. Commissioner Mason [read] the letter, and, observing that it had been [written] by a man of education, inquired if the sender was either insane or given to drinking. Jackson [illegible] he was either. The commis[sioner] suggested that he should write a reply to en[deavor] to ferret out if possible the real plans of the [illegible], but this Jackson refused to do, his [illegible] being to get the whole matter off his [hands]. At his request Commissioner Mason promised to take charge of the affair and consult [illegible] with Conkling, and if necessary with President [Arthur]. He believed that the letter should be [illegible] a less bloodthirsty spirit.

The Stalwarts' Boom.

[illegible] Oct. 1.—A New York special says: The [feeling] against Mr. Conkling in the republican [party of] this state still continues without abatement. Washington, Sept. 29.—The department of state furnishes the following correspondence:

TOKIO, Sept. 21, 1881.

Yoshida, Japanese Minister at Washington: You are instructed to transmit the following message to Hon. James G. Blaine, secretary of state. We have received with feelings of profound sorrow a telegram from our minister announcing the death of President Garfield. Favorable reports of his condition we have received make this sad announcement more unexpected and painful. In the name of his majesty we tender to you and the stricken and sadly bereaved family our heartfelt condolence and sympathy. INOUYE, Min. foreign affairs.

The secretary acknowledges as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, Sept. 29, 1881.

Sir—I embrace the first opportunity afforded by constant pressure of public affairs since the death of President Garfield to tender you, and through you to your government, sincere and grateful thanks for the touching message of sympathy conveyed by yours of the 21st inst. in the telegraphic message from his excellency, Mr. Inouye his majesty's minister for foreign affairs. In the deep affliction which has befallen us, the grief stricken family of your beloved chief magistrate, and the mourning people of the United States have found abundant sympathy and no little consolation in the eloquent proofs that their loss and ours is deplored throughout the world. Few of the innumerable messages received have more deeply moved the widow and family of the late president than the sincere utterances of his majesty and the government and people of Japan conveyed in Mr. Inouye's dispatch. Accept, sir, on this sad occasion the renewed assurance of my highest consideration,

ROBERT R. HITT, Acting Sec'y.

There [are] still over twenty-one millions in bonds still out[standing] upon which interest has ceased. Some [illegible] bonds should have been presented eleven [illegible]. The Star Route Ring.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Warrants for the star route people filed yesterday have been served and returned. Brady, Turner and French are here and report this afternoon. McDonough is in Dakota and Brown is absent.

The Star Route Prosecution.

One of the counsel retained by the government in the prosecution of the star route cases, who is thoroughly familiar with the results of the jury trials in this district for 20 years, said to-day that there has never been any doubt about obtaining indictments in the star route cases. The grand juries all through were drawn pretty much in the way as petit jurors, and rarely held out against the government. If it has any case at all, and the present grand jury is a very fair one as grand juries go. It is petit juries that the government is generally at an advantage with in this district. It is understood that Gen. Brady's counsel will to-morrow make a motion in the criminal court to strike from the records the information presented Friday last by government counsel. This step, it is said, will be taken on the grounds that the proceedings were unusual and the facts set forth in confirmation are insufficient to maintain action.

A Large Decrease.

The debt statement shows a decrease of the public debt during September of $17,483,041; cash in treasury, $259,686,547; gold certificates, $5,248,920; silver certificates, $64,110,910; certificates of deposit outstanding, $8,314,000; funding certificates, $636,050; legal tenders outstanding, $346,681,016; fractional currency outstanding, $7,088,506.

Fast Pacing.

Louisville, Oct. 2.—Little Brown Jug made a first quarter to-day in 33 seconds, but his tremendous speed was checked by a bad skip between the quarter and half and walked in. He unrolled a furious gait on the home-stretch for another heat, made the quarter in 32¾, sailed like an arrow and with twinkling feet made the half in 1:05; three-quarter in 1:38 and mile under lash in 2:12. He had been too much exhausted on first trial to keep up his heavy gait.

MEXICO.

Sectarian Warfare.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—A permit for burial in consecrated ground was refused to a native Protestant at Xochitla, Mexico, and the corpse lay decomposing for three days. The civil authorities could offer no relief, and when the Protestants organized a funeral procession the mob stoned it and threatened further violence; so a secret burial took place. A demand has been made that congress investigate this violation of the law guaranteeing freedom of religion.

WEST INDIES.

Fight With Cuban Bandits.

Havana, Sept. 30.—In the jurisdiction of Cienfuegos the soldiers defeated a formidable body of bandits under a mulatto chief, Filomeno Sarday. Two bandits were killed and one wounded and taken prisoner. Eleven bandits' horses were captured. Sarday is supposed to be severely wounded. A few days before the bandits ambushed the soldiers and killed seven, including the sergeant.

Shade in Pastures.

[National Live Stock Journal.]

There are intelligent farmers who insist that shade in pastures is a positive disadvantage to stock, hogs excepted. The argument usually advanced is that the animals, especially cattle, will form the habit of standing or lying in the shade and will not eat enough, whereas, if they had no shade, they would spend the day in eating. The answer is twofold. Animals need time to digest their food as well as to eat it; and were the pastures in the condition they should be, a considerable part in each day should be spent by the animal in rest, giving time to ruminate and digest the food eaten in the cool of the day. Secondly, during the extremely hot weather, stock eat but little in the middle of the day, even when they have no shelter.

Probably much of the prejudice against shade in the prairie regions has arisen from the fact that often where there is some shade in such regions, it is made by a thicket of low-growing trees and bushes along the borders of a slough, or some low, wet land. But shade in such a place is a very different thing from that furnished by trees on high, dry land where the breeze has full play and flies, gnats, etc., are found in no greater numbers than in any other dry place. True there are some disadvantages accompanying shade trees—there is loss of grass, and some portion of the droppings of the animals is partly wasted—but we never see animals standing in shelterless fields during such days as have characterized July and August in much of the west during the past season without a feeling of pity for them.

THE AUTOPSY.

Official Report of the Attending Physicians.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Philadelphia, Oct. 1.—The October issue of the American Journal of Medical Science, contains the following official report of the autopsy of President Garfield, prepared by the surgeons in charge of the official record of the post mortem examination of the body of President J. A. Garfield, made Sept. 20, 1881, commencing at 4:30 P.M., eighteen hours after his death at Francklyn cottage, Elberon, N. J.

There present and assisting were: Dr. D. W. Bliss, Surgeon General J. K. Barnes, Assistant Surgeon J. J. Woodward, U. S. A., Dr. Robert Reyburn, Dr. Frank H. Hamilton, Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, Dr. Andrew H. Smith of Elberon and New York, and Acting Assistant Surgeon D. S. Lamb, of the army medical museum, Washington.

Before commencing the examination, consultation was held by those physicians in the room adjoining that in which the body lay, and it was unanimously agreed that the dissection should be made by Dr. Lamb and that Surgeon Woodward should record the observations made. It was further unanimously agreed that the cranium should not be opened. Surgeon Woodward then proposed that the examination should be conducted as follows: That the body should be viewed externally and any morbid appearances existing recorded; that a catheter should be passed into the wound, as was done in life, to wash it out for the purpose of assisting to find if possible the track of the bullet; that a long incision should next be made from the superior extremity of the sternum to the pubis and this crossed by a transverse one just below the umbilicus; that the abdominal flaps thus made should then be turned back and the abdominal viscera examined; that after the abdominal cavity was opened the position of the bullet should be ascertained if possible before making any further incision, and that the thoracic viscera should be examined. This order of procedure was unanimously agreed to and the examination was then proceeded with, and the following external appearances were observed: The body was considerably emaciated, but the face was much less wasted than the limbs. A preserving fluid had been injected by the embalmer a few hours before into the left femoral artery. The pipes used for the purpose were still in position under the surface.

Confluent, in groups of two to four or more A similar but much less abundant eruption was observed sparsely scattered over the corresponding region on the right side. An oval excavated ulcer about an inch long, the result of a small carbuncle, was seated over the spinous process of the tenth dorsal vertebrae. Over the sacrum there were four small bed sores, the largest about an inch in diameter. Five acorn pustules and a number of irregular spots of post mortem hypostatic congestion were scattered over the shoulders, back and buttock. The inferior part of the scrotum was much discolored by hypostatic congestion. A group of hemorrhoidal tumors, rather larger than walnuts, protruded from the anus depressed. A cicatrix of the wound made by the pistol bullet was recognized over the 10th intercostal space, three and a half inches to the right of the vertebral spine. A deep line or incision [made in part by the operation of July 25th, and extended by that of August 8th] occupied a position closely correspondent to the upper border of the right twelfth rib. It commenced posteriorly about two inches from the vertebral spine and extended forward a little more than three inches. At the interior extremity of this incision there was a deep, nearly square abraded surface about an inch across. A well oiled flexible catheter fourteen inches long was then passed into this wound as had been done to wash it out during life. More resistance was at first encountered than had usually been the case, but after several trials the catheter entered without any violence to its full length. It was then put in position, and the body exposed frequently for examination of viscera. The cranium was not opened. A long incision was made from the superior extremity of the sternum to the pubis, followed by a transverse incision crossing the abdomen just below the umbilicus. The four flaps thus formed were turned back and the abdominal viscera exposed. The subcutaneous adipose tissue was divided by an incheous attack of chronic dysentery from which the patient is said to have suffered during the civil war. On the right side there were a few similar adhesions.

In the pelvis there was some clotted blood and rather more than a pint of bloody fluid. A foot note here says a large part of this fluid had probably transuded from the injected material of the embalmer]. The blood coagula, having been turned out and collected, measured nearly a pint. It was now evident that the secondary hemorrhages had been the immediate cause of death, but the point from which the blood had escaped was not at once apparent. The omentum was not adherent to the intestines, which were moderately distended with gas. No intestinal adhesions were found other than those between the colon and liver already mentioned. The abdominal cavity being now washed out as thoroughly as possible, a fruitless attempt was made to obtain some indications of the position of the bullet before making any further incisions. By pushing the intestines aside the extremity of the catheter which had passed into the wound could be felt between the peritoneum and right iliac fascia; but it had evidently doubled upon itself, and although a prolonged search was made, nothing could be seen or felt to indicate the presence of the bullet either in that region or elsewhere. The abdominal viscera were then carefully removed from the body placed in suitable vessels, and then examined seriatim with the following result: Adhesions between the liver and transverse colon proved to found an abscess cavity between the under surface of the liver and the traverse colon, which involved the gall bladder and extended to about the same distance on each side of it, measuring six inches transversely and four inches from before backward. The backward cavity was lined by a thick pyogenic membrane, which completely replaced the capsule of that part of the under surface of the liver occupied by the abscess. It contained about 2 ounces of greenish yellow fluid. The texture of pus matter in this abscess did not involve any portion of the substance of the liver, except the surface with which it was in contact, and no communication could be detected between it and any part of the wound. Some recent peritoneal adhesions existed between the upper surface of the right lobe of the liver, and diaphragm. The liver was larger than normal, weighing 84 ounces. Its substance was firm but of a pale yellowish color on its surface and throughout the interior of the organ from fatty degeneration. No evidence that it had been penetrated by the bullet could be found, nor were there any abscesses in any part of its tissue. The spleen was connected with the diaphragm by adhesions. There were several rather deep congenital fissures in its margin, giving it a lobulated appearance. It was abnormally large, weighing 18 ounces, of a very dark red color, both on the surface and on each section. Its parenchyma was soft and flabby, but contained no abscesses or infarctions. There were some recent peritoneal adhesions between the posterior wall of the stomach and posterior abdominal parieties. With this exception no abnormalities were discovered in the stomach or intestines, nor were any other evidences of general or local peritonitis found besides those already specified. The right kidney weighed six ounces, the left kidney seven. Just beneath the capsule of the left kidney, at about the middle of its convex border, there was a little abscess, one-third of an inch in diameter. There were three small serous cysts on the convex border of the right kidney just beneath its capsule. In other respects the tissue of both kidneys were normal in appearance and in texture. The urinal bladder was empty. Behind the right kidney, after the removal of that organ from the body, the dilated track of the bullet was dissected into. It was found that from the point at which it had fractured the right eleventh rib, three inches and a half to the right of the vertebral spine, the missile had gone to the left obliquely and forwards, passing through the body of the first lumbar vertebra and lodging in the adipose connective tissue, immediately below the lower border of the pancreas, about two inches and a half to the left of the spinal column, and behind the peritoneum it had become completely encysted. The track of the bullet between the point at which it had fractured the eleventh rib and that at which it entered the first lumbar vertebrae was considerably dilated and pus had burrowed downwards through the adipose tissue, behind the right kidney and thence had found its way between the peritoneum and the right iliac fascia, making a descending channel, which extended almost to the groin. The adipose tissue behind the kidney in the vicinity of this descending channel was much thickened and condensed by inflammation. In this channel, which was found almost free from pus lay the flexible catheter introduced into the wound at the commencement of the autopsy. Its extremity was found doubled up on itself immediately beneath the peritoneum reposing upon the iliac fascia, where the channel was dilated into a pouch of considerable size. This long descending channel is now clearly seen to have been caused by the burrowing of pus from the wound and which was supposed during life to have been the track of the bullet. The last dorsal together with the first and second lumbar vertebrae and the twelfth rib, were then removed from the body for a more thorough examination. When this examination was made it was found that the bullet had penetrated the first lumbar vertebrae in the upper part of the right side. The aperture by which it entered involved the inter-vertebrae cartilage next above and was situated just below and anterior to the inter-vertebrae foramen, from which its upper margin was about a quarter of an inch distant, passing obliquely to the left and forward, through the upper part of the body of the first lumbar vertebrae. The bullet emerged by an aperture, the center of which was about half an inch to the left median line, and which also involved the inter-vertebrae cartilage. Next above the cancellated tissue of the body of the first lumbar vertebrae was very much comminuted and fragments somewhat displaced. Several deep fissures extended from the track of the bullet into the lower part of the body of the twelfth dorsal vertebrae. Others extended through the first lumbar vertebrae into the inter-vertebrae cartilage between it and the second lumbar vertebrae. Both this cartilage and that next above were partly destroyed by ulceration. A number of minute fragments from the fractured lumbar vertebrae had been driven into adjacent soft parts. It was further found that the right 12th rib also was fractured at a point an inch and a quarter to right of the transverse process of the 12th dorsal vertebrae. This injury had not been recognized during life. On sawing through the vertebrae a little to the right of the median line it was found that the spinal column was not involved by the track of the bullet. The spinal cord and other contents of this portion of the spinal canal presented no abnormal appearances. The rest of the spinal cord was not examined beyond the first lumbar vertebrae. The bullet continued to go to the left, passing behind the pancreas to the point where it was found. There it was enveloped in a firm cyst of connective tissue, which contained besides the ball a minute quantity of inspissated pus, which formed a thin layer over a portion of the surface of the lead. There was also a black shred adhering to part of the cyst wall which proved on microscopic examination to be the remains of a blood clot. For about an inch from this cyst the track of the ball behind the pancreas was completely obliterated by the healing process. Thence as far backward as the body of the first lumbar vertebrae the track was filled with coagulated blood which extended to the left into a regular space rent in the adjoining adipose tissue.

Behind the peritoneum and above the pancreas blood had worked its way to the left, burrowing finally through the peritoneum and behind the spleen into the abdominal cavity. The rending of tissues by extravasation of this blood was undoubtedly the cause of the paroxysm of pain which occurred a short time before death. This mass of coagulated blood was of irregular form and nearly as large as a man's fist. It could be distinctly seen from in front through the peritoneum after its site behind the greater curvature of the stomach had been exposed by dissection of the greater omentum from the stomach, and especially after some delicate adhesions between the stomach and part of the peritoneum covering the blood mass had been broken down by the fingers. From the relations of the mass as thus seen it was believed that the hemorrhage had proceeded from one of the mesenteric arteries, but as it was clear that minute dissection would be required to determine the particular branch involved, it was agreed that the infiltered tissue and adjoining soft parts should be preserved for subsequent study.

On examination and dissection made in accordance with this agreement it was found that the fatal hemorrhage proceeded from a rent nearly four-tenths of an inch from the main trunk of the splenic artery and two inches and a half to the left of the coeliac axis. The rent must have occurred at least several days before death, since the everted edges in the slit on the vessel were united by firm adhesion to the surrounding connective tissue, thus forming an almost continuous wall bounding the adjoining portion of the blood cloud. Moreover, the peripheral portion of the clot in this vicinity, was disposed in pretty firm concentric layers. It was further found that the cyst below the lower margin of the pancreas in which the bullet was found situated three inches and a half to the left of the coeliac axis beside the mass of coagulated blood just described. Another, about the size of a walnut, was found in the greater omentum, near the splenic extremity of the stomach. The communication, if any, between this and the larger hemorrhagic mass, could not be made out.

Examination of the thoracic viscera resulted as follows: The heart weighed eleven ounces. All cavities were empty except the right ventricle, in which a few shreds of soft reddish coagulated blood adhered to the internal surface. On the surface of the mitral valve there were several spots of fatty degeneration. With this exception the cardiac valves were normal. The muscular tissue of the heart was soft and tore easily. A few cells of fatty degeneration existed in the lining of the membranes of the aorta, just above the semi-lunar valves, and a slender clot of fibrine was found in the aorta where it was divided about two inches from these valves for the removal of the heart.

On the right side slight pleuritic adhesions existed between the convex surface of the lower lobe of the lung and costal pleura, and firm adhesions between the interior edge of the lower lobe. The pericardium and diaphragm of the right lung weighed 32 ounces. The posterior part of the fissure between its upper and lower lobes was congenitally incomplete. The lower lobe of the right lung was hypostatically congested, and considerable portions, especially towards its base, were the seat of bronchial pneumonia. The bronchial tubes contained a considerable quantity of spongy mucous pus. Their muco-pus surface was reddened by catarrhal bronchitis. The lung tissue was oedematous; [a foot note here says: "A part at least of this condition was doubtless due to extravasation of injection fluid used by embalmer;"] but contained no abscesses or infarctions on the left side. The lower lobe of the lung was bound behind to the costal pleura afore to the upper lobe, and below to the diaphragm by pretty firm pleuretic adhesions. The left lung weighed 27 ounces. The conditions of its bronchial tubes and of the lung tissue was very nearly the same as on the right side. The chief difference being that the area of broncho-pneumonia in the lower lobe was much less extensive in the left lung than in the right. In the lateral part of the lower lobe of the left lung and about an inch from its pleural surface there was a group of four minute areas of gray hepatization each about one-eighth of an inch in diameter. There were no infarctions and no abscesses in any part of the lung tissues.

The surgeons assisting at the autopsy were unanimously of the opinion that on reviewing the history of the case in connection with the autopsy, it is quite evident that the different suppurating surfaces and especially the fractured spongy tissue of the vertebrae furnish sufficient explanation of the septic condition which existed during life.

About an hour after the post mortem examination was completed the physicians named at the commencement of this report assembled for further consultation in an adjoining cottage. A brief outline of the results of the post mortem examination was drawn up and signed by all the physicians and handed to private secretary, J. Stanley Brown, who was requested to furnish copies to the newspaper press, signed Bliss, Barnes, Woodward, Reyburn and Lamb. As the above report contains a paragraph detailing observations made at Washington on pathological specimens preserved for that purpose, the names of Drs. F. H. Hamilton, D. Hayes Agnew and A. H. Smith are not appended to it. It has however been submitted to them, and they have given their assent to the other portions of the report.

ATLANTIC CABLE.

The Bishops' Manifesto.

New York, Oct. 1.—The Herald's Dublin special says: The following is the text of an important manifesto on the subject of the state of Ireland, which was issued by the Catholic hierarchy of Ireland after their meeting at Maynooth college yesterday afternoon. Seventeen archbishops and bishops were present at the conference: Influenced by the same deep solicitude for the welfare of their flock, which moved them at their last general meeting in April to solicit the government to amend the land bill, which was then before parliament, the bishops consider it their duty to declare at their present meeting that the new land act is a great benefit to the tenant class, for which the gratitude of a large portion of the country is due Mr. Gladstone and those who helped him to carry this measure through parliament. The bishops earnestly exhort their flocks to avail themselves of the advantages derivable from this act, believing, it rightly used, it will bring present good and help them obtain their rights, both social and political, which they justly claim. The bishops would also urge the tenant farmers to use the means provided in the land act and every other means in their power to improve the condition of the laboring class. The bishops avail themselves of this opportunity to call on their clergy to warn their flocks against all secret agencies of violence and intimidation, which only become enemies of the people, and to the laity to prove the love they bear their country and their faith by seconding the clergy in the suppression of anti-social and anti-catholic abuses; also by removing as far as is in each one's power the stigma which our enemies have sought to fasten upon the people, that they will not pay their just debts, which they are bound to do. The bishops unite with the people in urging on the government the release of those who are still imprisoned, hoping that such a measure will contribute a little to the peace of the country.

A Tale of Arctic Perils.

San Francisco, Oct. 1.—The whaling schooner R. B. Handy, Capt. Winants, arrived to-day from the arctic. She brought down Capt. Gifford and the crew of the whaler Daniel Webster, crushed in the ice near Point Barrow. Capt. Gifford confirms the report contained in the cablegram published by the New York Herald, September 21st, last, that the natives had seen a wrecked ship to the eastward and four white men among the natives. Conversation between Gifford and the natives was conducted principally by signs and was difficult to understand. From the signs made these men were either sea or sick as the natives in speaking of the one indicated their condition by placing his head on the ground in an attitude of sleep or death. No whales have been in the vicinity of Point Barrow for the past two years.

Capt. Winants reports that when he left the arctic fleet, 1st August they had the following catch: Steamer Belvidere six whales, bark Coral nine, Pacific six, Francis Palmer four, Sea Breeze eight, Sappho two, Ohio Low and twelve, Rainbow thirteen, Northern Light one, Progress ten, Eliza three, Dawn seven and one-half, Abraham Barker nine, Helen Mar, seven and one-half, Atlantic six, Fleetwing seven, Hunter ten and Hidalgo three. The mails, express, passenger baggage, and treasure, everything in fact, was lost. Nothing was saved. The steamer was cut adrift to save the wharf. The estimated loss is $12,000. The passengers on board were Rev. J. B. Good, Rev. Mr. Whitaker, D. Campbell, Stevenson, Bell and others. The books being burned, I cannot give all the names. The freight was owned by E. Mr. Andrew D. White, minister to Berlin, tells a reporter of the New York World that the Siemens electric railway in Berlin is a perfect success, that by it, cars can be run on the elevated railway, 20 miles an hour, by an apparatus easily packed in a space two by three feet under the car. The wonderful results achieved by Prof. Siemens in the development of fruits and vegetables by electric light were fully described recently in a special cable dispatch of great length to the World. The splendid work done by the Siemens Brothers, also with the new American cable as attest their practical skill unmistakably, and it may well be that, as Mr. White says, they have brought us to the eve of a revolution in transportation.

FATAL RAILWAY COLLISION.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Aylmer, Sept. 30.—An excursion train on the Air Line to the exhibition grounds at London came in collision to-day with a freight train at Orwell, miles from this place. Five of the nine passenger coaches were completely wrecked, two persons were killed outright and several missing, supposed to be buried in the wreck. About twenty were severely wounded, a large number slightly. The dead are Willie Cook of Aylmer, W. Ainsley and son, the driver and fireman of the excursion train, and two names unknown.

Detroit, Oct. 1.—The accident on the Great Western railway between Aylmer and Orwell is worse than indicated by first reports, and altogether is unaccountable. Conductor Maxwell on the excursion had orders to meet the freight train at Aylmer, but being ten minutes ahead of time, Maxwell was intending to meet the freight at Orwell. The engineer of the latter saw the excursion train approaching, slacked off and blew his whistle for several minutes, and had his train almost at a standstill. The engineer of the excursion kept running ahead regardless of the freight, which he must have seen for more than two miles, and never blew the whistle or gave the slightest indication that the road was not cleared. He kept on at full speed and collided with terrific force with the freight. Five of the excursion coaches were telescoped and four occupants killed outright, and Engineer Wansley and his son, the fireman, crushed beneath the engine. About twenty were severely wounded and a great many slightly. As near as can be ascertained the killed are William Cooke of Aylmer, Wansley and son of St. Thomas, W. J. Hines of Jarvis, a man from Delhi, name unknown, and E. Stanley of Copenhagen. The wounded are Mr. Dennis and wife of Bay City, Mich., badly; Eliza Adams and wife of Malahide; R. P. Black of Vienna; a young lady from Bay City, Mich.; Thos. Brown and daughter of Malahide; Frank Morrison, Carter Warner, and [illegible] Harrison of Aylmer.

GUITEAU'S TRIAL.

Opinions of Prominent Chicago Lawyers on the Situation.

[Chicago Herald, Sept. 21st.]

With a view to learning the position now occupied by the assassin, Guiteau, before the law of the land a representative of the Chicago Herald called upon several legal gentlemen versed in the criminal code and solicited information.

Emery A. Storrs was found in his office and gave his opinion, in answer to interrogatories, upon the state of the case.

"Will Guiteau be tried in New Jersey, Mr. Storrs?"

"If he comes to the bar it will undoubtedly be in the District of Columbia, and if convicted he will be hung there."

"Is it a fact that under the common law, which prevails in the District of Columbia, the accused must be tried in the state where his victim died?"

"That's all nonsense; it is of a class with the fallacy that a person injured by an assault must die within nine days from the attack in order that the charge of murder may lie. A man told me seriously that it was a pity Guiteau could not be hung, as more than nine days had elapsed since the shooting. The theory that a change of venue must be taken to every state through which the victim of a murderous assault passes before death is mere folly; it is not in accordance with practical wisdom and justice."

"What court will have jurisdiction over the case?"

"The same court which tried Sickles. The United States court takes cognizance of criminal matters in the District of Columbia."

"You apprehend, Mr. Storrs, that the assassin will be given his dues."

"He cannot escape unless any defense he may set up. It is within the pale of possibility that he may never face the bar, but the ignominy of hanging under sanction of the law is far more fitting than lynching."

"Will there not be difficulty in getting a jury in this case?"

"Undoubtedly it will be hard to impanel a jury but one will be found, and it will come to a correct conclusion. No jury could avoid convicting Guiteau with the facts in view. The jury which would find emotional insanity a good plea on the part of Mason would disregard it coming from Guiteau."

"There is no necessity or likelihood of the trial occurring in New Jersey, then?" repeated the interrogator.

"Not the least. That idea belongs to the past; it is a popular superstition. The crime was really consummated in Washington and the trial will be there. In short, the status is this: If Guiteau comes to trial it will be in the District of Columbia; and if convicted, there he will be hung."

Mr. Storrs referred to the action of the coroner at Elberon, and remarked upon the advantage taken of the sad occasion by some persons to hoist themselves into prominence.

"It shows," said the eminent advocate in his inimitable Storrsian manner, "how largely foolishness enters into the composition of man, and how slight irritation will bring it to the surface."

The Hon. Leonard Swett, in response to the question whether Guiteau would have to be tried in New Jersey, replied very nearly in the words of the dispatch received by the local press from Long Branch yesterday morning. "New Jersey has a law by which one who receives a wound in another state and dies from its effects in New Jersey becomes the victim of a murderer and the slayer can be apprehended on a requisition from the governor and tried, sentenced and executed in that state."

"Is it true that under the common law the prosecution must take place in the state where the injured person dies?"

"Yes, such is the common law which governs in the District of Columbia and applies in this case."

"Will it be difficult to get a jury in the case Mr. Swett?"

"I think not," answered the great jury lawyer.

"The president died in New Jersey," said he. "That is all that occurred in relation to the tragedy in that state. Guiteau has perhaps never been in that state, and before a person can be brought into a court that court must have jurisdiction over that person. Does the fact of the victim's death in New Jersey bring the assassin under the jurisdiction of the courts in that state? When Guiteau fired a bullet into the body of the president he completed the crime, as far as he was concerned. He did all in his power to accomplish his end, and under the English common law if the victim died within a year and a day from the date of the injury, the charge of murder would lie. The mere fact of the removal of the president to another state and his death there can make no possible difference in the gravity of the crime, nor does it deprive the District of Columbia of its jurisdiction. It is possible both places might have jurisdiction, as two states often have coextensive supervision of crimes. Thus, a person might steal stock in Indiana and take it to Illinois, and he would be amenable in either state, and could be tried in either."

"Do you think the plea of insanity will avail the assassin as a defense?"

"No. When he held the pistol in his hand he deliberately aimed at and shot the president, he acted with malice prepense and aforethought and with intent to kill. I believe his mind was not well-balanced; that is, he was egotistical, selfish and imagined he had a grievance; but he knew what he was doing, knew it was wrong, and made himself fully amenable to the law."

Mr. Van Buren thought it would be very hard to get a jury in the case. Any man, woman or child who can read or who has ears knows the circumstances and has formed an opinion on the case. It will be very difficult to obtain an intelligent jury.

Spurts of disgusting mucous from the nostrils or upon the tonsils, Watery Eyes, Snuffles, Buzzing in the Ears, Deafness, Crackling sensations in the Head, Intermittent Pains over the Eyes, Fetid Breath, Nasal Twang, Scabs in the Nostrils, and Tickling in the Throat are SIGNS of CATARRH.

No other such loathsome, treacherous and undermining malady curses mankind. One-fifth of our Children die of diseases generated by its Infectious Poison, and one-fourth of living men and women drag out miserable existences from the same cause. Dr. Wei De Meyer's Catarrh Cure absorbs the purulent virus and kills the seeds of poison in the earthiest parts of the system. It will not only relieve, but certainly cure Catarrh at any stage. It is the only remedy which in our judgment, has ever yet really cured a case of Chronic Catarrh.

H. S.

The Daily Oregonian.

MONDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 3, 1881.

THE CABINET.

According to a custom, when Arthur was inaugurated president the members of the cabinet all tendered their resignations and since that time there has been a great deal of discussion as to whether any, and if so, who will remain and who will be appointed instead of those who shall absolutely retire. That all should formally tender their resignations and that President Arthur should invite them, formally, to remain are matters of course. But both were matters of form more than anything else, and a few weeks will probably show that Arthur, not being willing to turn a complete somersault himself, will not be able to make the gentlemen who were in the cabinet under his predecessor perform that feat. That the new president would find it irksome to retain in his council chamber constitutional advisers who are not in accord with his policy or who may be objectionable to him for any other reason is apparent. At the same time the abrupt dismissal of any of them by his own act would be a hazardous exercise of discretion under existing circumstances. The late president is so enshrined in the hearts of the people that those who were associated with him, are generally regarded with a good deal of confidence. The Garfield cabinet was of a very high character and doubtless aided largely in making the brief administration of Arthur's predecessor so strong in the affections of the people. Garfield's administration was but four months old when he was stricken down by the assassin, and yet it had been so eminently successful in its financial policy and the general work of political purification, that a feeling of confidence was inspired in its success, and all looked forward to the achievements of wise statesmanship. While the present intense feeling exists in the national mind, any departure by President Arthur, from the understood policy of his predecessor will engender painful suspicion and bring down upon him severe condemnation. This places him in a very embarrassing position. It is but right that he should be allowed free choice of his advisers and subordinates in office, and ample room and verge enough to carry out his own plans of government. But he is overshadowed by the revered memory of the last president, which stands like an austere deity to inspire him with caution. His actions will be watched with jealous solicitude, and suspicion oft aroused where the motive is proper.

COUNTY FAIRS.

This is the season for county fairs and several are to be held in this state and Washington territory this month. Agriculture is, of course, and must continue to be a predominant interest of the people of Oregon, yet there are numerous subsidiary industries, mechanical and mercantile, that furnish features of importance at the county fairs and should continue to do so. In past years the great feature at these fairs has been the horse races, and the next the home mechanical and manufacturing interests have always surpassed in variety and shown to greater advantage than anything in the shape of agricultural products, from which intelligent and profitable comparisons of the various modes of tillage might be made. It is a well known fact that differences in soil and climate make different mode of tillage necessary to bring about the most profitable results to the agriculturist. The systems of tillage pursued in Oregon are not identical with those pursued in any other country and are in a great measure still primitive and experimental. Enough, however, is known to take advantage of the climate, seasons and fertile soil, yet the knowledge is not sufficient to grasp the whole capabilities of the situation. A full knowledge of the agricultural capabilities of Oregon and Washington, to what extent variety of cultivation and production can be successfully pursued, is of the most vital importance to the country. Nothing will or can more rapidly lead to the knowledge necessary to foster farming industry and facilitate healthy agricultural development than intelligent comparison of production and methods of culture by practical farmers at these annual fairs. The farmers bring together their various products and compare experiences in cultivation, and from such exhibitions lessons may be learned and valuable information may be gathered that can in no other way be obtained. To render fairs a distributive point for information of actual value to the whole agricultural interests of the state would be to make them of far greater benefit than they are now, and would make them no more expensive to those who attend them. This is one of the changes necessary to make the county fairs more nearly successful in accomplishing what should be their prime object. True, it would, perhaps no advance the horse racing very much, but it would in no way interfere with that all-absorbing feature.

THE EXPENSE.

Of course congress will pay the doctor's bills and all other expenses of the president's sickness. There can be no question as to the alacrity with which the expense of the whole unhappy affair would be paid even if there were no legal obligation in the matter; but it is said, by lawyers that all reasonable claims could be collected through the courts. As president, Garfield was the chief officer of the army and as such entitled to surgical and medical treatment at the public expense. It is certain that he was shot as the head of the nation and because in the discharge of his duty as president he declined to appoint to office an incompetent and vicious man. If Garfield had not been president he would not have incurred Guiteau's animosity. It is said by lawyers that if the postmaster general or the head of any of the other departments of the government should be disabled in any trouble growing out of their official relations, the government would be legally responsible for all necessary expenses. Secretary Brown estimates that the whole expense of the president's sickness will be about $250,000. The doctors, he thought, with the exception of Barnes and Woodward, who as army surgeons are expected to attend the president as part of their official duties, should receive at least $100,000. Dr. Bliss—the estimate is still Brown's—will probably receive $25,000 and the other doctors, except Agnew and Hamilton, $100 per day each for the term of their attendance. Agnew and Hamilton will probably receive $15,000 each. "A singular thing," said Mr. Brown, "and one which intimates the feeling of the people in the matter, is that we experience the greatest difficulty in getting bills from any one. Even persons who rendered services which are usually paid for at once, such as furnishing food, carriages, medicines, etc., refuse to send in their bills, and I do not know of a single bill yet sent in for services or goods rendered to the president during his illness." The president at all times during his sickness was very scrupulous in wanting everything paid for. Even the articles sent as gifts he wanted paid for or returned.

The city of St. Louis has been making persistent war upon gambling for a year or more, but the keno and faro rooms continue to do a thriving business. After having exhausted all the authority of the city in vain, the aid of the state was sought. The legislature was induced to pass a most stringent law, making gambling a penal offense. A board of police commissioners, selected from the high moral element of the population, was appointed to see that the law against gambling was enforced. In spite of all this, however, keno holds its own. The owners of gambling establishments rally the sporting fraternity around them, and notify ambitious politicians that their public career must terminate unless they give the gamblers a chance. The sports brought influence enough to bear recently to obtain a numerously signed petition, containing the names of many business men, requesting the police board to cease their operations against the gamblers. There are now confined in the city jail twenty-eight persons charged with murder, and this, it is asserted, is one of the results of a very lax enforcement of the laws.

The death of Mrs. Millard Fillmore serves to recall a singular incident connected with her two husbands. In 1847, while she was the wife of Hon. Ezekiel McIntosh of Albany Mr. Fillmore was a candidate for the position of state controller of New York. Some persons who desired to defeat his election raised about $20,000 and placed it in the hands of Mr. McIntosh, instructing him to place it in a bank in his own name and not to make the matter public. He did as desired, but before the fund could be drawn out to use for election purposes the treasurer fell sick and died. Mr. Fillmore was elected controller, and many years afterwards married Mrs. McIntosh, and received, as a part of her dowry, the money that had been raised to defeat his election. The ex-president used to enjoy telling the story, and often remarked that "the money was placed where it would do the most good to him."

The monument to be erected over the grave of Bayard Taylor at Kennett Square, Pa., by his widow, will consist of a circular Greek altar, three feet six inches in height and two feet eight inches in diameter of the die, bearing on the top a lamp with a flame, and on the round a bronze bas-relief portrait by Launt Thompson. The latter will be of two-thirds life size and be partly surrounded by a wreath cut in relief on the stone. One-half of the wreath will be of the leaves of the bay in honor of Mr. Taylor's career as a poet, while the other will consist of those of the oak, in memory of his civic honor as a member of the diplomatic service. Underneath will be a quotation from Prince Deucalion.

The English government has received information that the African slave trade is still extensively carried on. It is stated that not fewer than 50,000 or 60,000 negroes are annually conveyed to the Turkish and Egyptian ports of the Red Sea, where they are disposed of to dealers from all parts of the sultan's dominions.

A rage for gold mining has again broken out in Georgia and North Carolina. A Boston company has just been organized with a capital of $4,000,000 to operate in Georgia. It is not unlikely that the managers will realize more from the stocks than from the mines.

It is most singular that the German government has taken no official notice of the death of President Garfield. All courts of Europe but that of Emperor William have displayed tokens of mourning.

Wheat in Germany a few years ago was 25 per cent dearer than rye. Now thanks to American importations, both are the same price.

It is estimated that 1000 square miles of territory have been burned over by the Michigan fires and 10,000 persons made homeless.

CITY.

TESTIMONIAL CONCERT.—It has heretofore been the custom in Portland whenever any of our home talent were about to leave for the east to complete their musical or artistic education, for our public to express their appreciation of the talents of the individual by giving them in some way a complimentary benefit. We know of no case more deserving than that of our local soprano, Miss Cora A. Packard. For years a useful and faithful member of the Handel & Haydn society, she has time again and oft given her services gratuitously for divers church, society and charity [illegible] the city; and now that she has determined to leave for a time, our citizens have an excellent opportunity of testifying by a crowded house, not only their appreciation of her talent, but of her many gratuitous efforts for charity's sake. Miss Packard will have the assistance of Miss Lizzie Anderson, Mrs. J. B. Wyatt, Mrs. D. Goodsell, Messrs. Franklin, Kinross and Coursen, and the bulk of the Handel & Haydn society's chorus. The programme will be largely operatic, selections from Maritana, Lucrezia Borgia, and Trovatore, the miserere from the last being one of the numbers. Tickets may be obtained at the various book and drug stores, also of Mr. Packard, Fifth and Alder, and the box plan will be open at Prentice's on Thursday after 9 A. M. The theater ought to be crowded, as the beneficiary fully deserves the compliment. The concert will take place on Friday evening next.

STARS REMOVED.—Saturday evening, when the special policemen reported for duty, they were informed that they could no longer wear stars, the council last Wednesday evening having refused [illegible] a former action which dispenses with their services. The men thus removed are: Sim C. [illegible], Joe Day, A. B. Brannan, Wm. Hickey Ben. [illegible] and Phil. Saunders. When the first resolution was passed Mayor Thompson received protests from nearly every merchant whose property was guarded by specials, and he refused to order the men removed until he called the council's attention to the dissatisfaction expressed. The only objection raised by any of the councilmen against them was that they would be tempted, in order to make a witness fee of $1.70 in each case, to make arrests of drunken men who were not disorderly, leaving their beats unprotected during the time engaged in conducting arrested persons to jail. Councilman Keller gave utterance to very sensible views during the discussion, when he said: "If we will hire good men as watchmen at no expense to the city, we should certainly give them stars and allow them to make arrests." The recent action in removing specials will add $540 a month to the [illegible] expense. It works an injustice on three [illegible] men as are now on the force, and the [illegible] in regard to stature and weight bars them [illegible] service.

[illegible] E. A.'S WIN.—Late Friday night it was understood that on account of the illness of two of the crew, the Willamettes would not contest [illegible]. This was the impression even up to [illegible] of the race Saturday, hence there was no [illegible] to witness the contest. Rather than re[illegible] after a date had been fixed, the Willamettes [illegible] up a crew that had had no practice [illegible] into the Neptune, a boat far inferior to the new cedar shell, and made a [illegible] from the start they knew would be [illegible], however, on account of inferior [illegible]. The crew were A. Grant, E. H. [illegible], his brother Dunbar. The Portland [illegible] Henderson, G. J. Malarkey, Wm. [illegible] Corbett. They were in excellent [illegible] pulled together every day for several [illegible]. Ingersoll was starter and John [illegible]. At 4:37 the boats got off in [illegible] Portlands soon taking the lead [illegible] a minute or more ahead of [illegible] and won easily in 30 minutes and [illegible] passing the stake boat 57 [illegible]. The [illegible] of both crews was good, [illegible] are to be praised for their [illegible] of certain defeat.

HENRY VILLARD.

The Railroad King's Address to the Board of Trade Committee.

He Outlines Great and Important Industries for this City—Personnel of the Visitors Accompanying Mr. Villard—Future Movements, etc.

The following gentlemen compose the Villard party, who arrived here Friday and are sojourning in the city: Henry Villard, Herr Herzog, of Berlin formerly secretary of state for Alsace-Lorraine and still connected officially with that government; Prof. James Bryce, M. P., the London correspondent of the New York Nation from its foundation; O. Von Ernsthausen, merchant, London; Capt. Henry H. Gorringe, U. S. N., of obelisk fame; General H. L. Burnett, a distinguished lawyer of New York; Julius Henri Brown, the well known New York journalist and author, who is now engaged on a story to be published in the Sacramento Union; William Lloyd Garrison, of Boston, son of the famous anti-slavery journalist and brother-in-law of Mr. Villard; H. J. Winser, late consul at Sonneburg, Germany; Wm. W. Bates, a prominent shipbuilder of Chicago; Charles Fairchild, a Boston capitalist; N. P. Hallowell, of Boston; C. F. McKim, a New York architect; Edward Abend, a banker of Belleville, Illinois, his son and nephew. Mr. Abend is a relative of Mr. Villard. Mr. Spofford, Mr. Villard's private secretary, a son of the librarian of congress; Geo. A. Pillsbury, a Minneapolis miller of prominence; J. C. Henderson, engineer and ship constructor, and Alfred L. Stokes, of Chicago, general eastern passenger agent of the O. R. & N. Co. Of this party Messrs. Villard, Herzog, Bryce, Gorringe and Spofford are guests of Mr. Paul Schulz; Mr. Ernsthausen of Mr. R. Koehler and the remainder of the party of Mr. C. H. Prescott.

Several of these gentlemen are understood to have come with the intention of looking over the Pacific northwest with a view to making investments. The party will visit all the principal parts of Oregon and Washington during the next few weeks, and much may be expected from their visit.

Saturday morning a committee from the board of trade of the city, consisting of Messrs. Macleay, Dodd, Arnold, Hirsch and Thompson, waited upon Mr. Villard at the office of the O. R. & N. Co. and presented their respects in the

FOLLOWING ADDRESS:

To Henry Villard and to those who accompany you: GENTLEMEN—The business men of Portland, represented by the board of trade, have the honor to pay you their respects, desiring to express their appreciation of your merits and of services to our city and our state at large. Recognizing the fact that your labors toward the development of our great northwest are without parallel, they regard you as an honorable representative of our citizenship, especially to be so esteemed, and as such are fully entitled to the highest honors that we as a board of trade can pay you.

We feel as business men of Oregon, to whom in a great measure the commerce of the northwest is entrusted, that you are entitled to peculiar honors at our hands. We come to welcome you and also to welcome the distinguished friends that accompany you, and to tender to you the hospitalities of the citizens of Portland.

Should you visit the interior, the valleys of the Willamette and Columbia, you will find millions of bushels of wheat and other cereals awaiting shipment to the sea over routes of travel and trade now established by your energy and largely brought into being by your sagacity, foresight and financial ability, and much of this produce from lands where but recently the herdsman and shepherd were the only toilers.

If to make two blades of grass grow where but one formerly grew is to be a public benefactor, then to you is honor especially due; the development of Oregon by improved routes of travel and improved means of conveying the products of our valleys to the markets of the world, encouraging every industry within our borders, is largely due to your ability and your skill.

You are welcome, then; welcome to Oregon; thrice welcome. Welcome to you and to your friends, and we hope to make your stay with us pleasant and agreeable.

Resolutions passed by the Portland board of trade Sept. 30, 1881.

WHEREAS, The development of the resources of a great state by opening new routes of trade and constructing railroads is a subject of gratitude, being a blessing to all within its borders, and by that development the wealth and prosperity of our land is increased, and

WHEREAS, Our state, Oregon and the adjoining territories have been the fortunate recipients of the results of the energy, skill, ability and labor of Mr. Henry Villard and the syndicate which he represents, in the reorganization and extension of the Oregon and California railroad, the Western Oregon railroad, the Oregon Railway and Navigation Co., and the Northern Pacific railroad, now called the Oregon Transcontinental system of railways, and

WHEREAS, The support of our state university has been most generously aided by Mr. Villard by a timely and munificent gift, therefore be it

Resolved, That as a board of trade we recognize in the achievements of Henry Villard the services of a most honorable citizen, and we desire as business men to express our appreciation of his merits and labors for the benefit of our state and the city of Portland.

Resolved, That this board of trade through a committee of six, consisting of W. S. Ladd, D. P. Thompson, Donald Macleay, Fred K. Arnold, Sol. Hirsch and Chas. H. Dodd, welcome Mr. Henry Villard and the distinguished friends that accompany him to our state and city, and tender to him our thanks and expressions of grateful feeling, and also tender to him and his friends a public reception to be given at such time and place as they may select.

Resolved, That these resolutions be presented to Mr. Villard.

Mr. Villard responded briefly to the committee, saying that he would be most happy to meet the board of trade and our citizens generally, and furnish all possible information in regard to the plans and purposes of himself and associates. At a future but not distant day the time would be fixed. At present he would only assure the gentlemen who had called upon him, that the city of Portland and the whole northwest had a great future; that the development so long waited for by the people was now at hand, and that no one need to entertain further doubts or fears. Money for carrying out the great plans of the corporations with which he was associated was in hand, to the amount of $60,000,000, and there could be no possibility of failure or delay. These enterprises would be pushed, and are now being pushed, with all energy. There was a future awaiting the country of which the people little dreamed. He would also say that plans were being prepared for establishment of great and important industries in the city of Portland, which would be stated and opened more fully at a future time. These industries would contribute very largely to the growth and prosperity of the city. Mr. Villard remarked that the navigation of the river below Portland must be improved. The city must see that this is done, and the corporations with which he is connected would assist in all possible ways. This, he remarked, is the one great present necessity. After some further conversation in an informal way with Mr. Villard and various gentlemen of the party, the committee of the board of trade withdrew.

Mr. Villard also spoke of a plan which he had entertained for establishing shipments of wheat from Portland to Liverpool by way of the Isthmus of Panama. It had been his purpose to put five or six steamships on each side, and he had made an effort to get a special rate on the Panama railroad. After a good deal of negotiation he succeeded, as he supposed, in getting a rate of two dollars and a half a ton, which would enable the shipments to be made. But objection was interposed by the Pacific Mail Company. It seems that this company on selling the road to representatives of the French canal scheme, had inserted a condition which reserved to their own steamships certain rights of traffic with which Mr. Villard's undertaking would have conflicted; and hence, unfortunately, the arrangement could not be made. But the incident shows the earnestness of Mr. Villard in devising ways to promote the commerce of our country.

The impression created by Mr. Villard's statements was in the highest degree reassuring. There can be no doubt that enormous capital is now about to develop an activity and growth here which have never been exceeded in any other part of the United States. In the future of Portland Mr. Villard expresses the most unbounded confidence. Within five years it will be a city of great activity and wealth, realizing a growth of which its "old inhabitants" have never dreamed. Mr. Villard, it should be observed, looking over the vast field of enterprise, not only sees but largely directs the agencies which are to bring about these results. Hence the value of his words.

Mr. Villard was Saturday forenoon engaged in conference with the officers of the different corporations under his control at the general office of the O. R. & N. Co. He made a thorough inspection of all the different departments and offices of the building and appeared to be well satisfied with the appearance of things. The future movements of Mr. Villard, during his stay, are not determined upon, as he has a double duty to perform, which includes those relating to the vast interests he has in charge and the courtesies to the distinguished party accompanying him, in affording them the best possible opportunity to see the country with all its vast resources, and wonderful possibilities.

Mr. Villard will remain in the city to-day, and to-morrow will leave for the Sound. This morning all the other members of the party, accompanied by Messrs. R. Koehler, P. Schulze and J. Brandt, will start to Roseburg by special train. The party will return to-morrow to Albany, and, crossing over to Corvallis by private conveyance, come down on the west side road, arriving here Tuesday afternoon.

THE NORTHWEST.

Western Oregon.

The public school at Philomath reports 51 pupils with Prof. M. H. Parker, principal.

The recent rain has put the ground in excellent condition for the autumn farming and the farmers are now busy improving the time in putting in their fall grain through out the valley.

Mrs. Mary Brown, mother of the late Mr. V. Brown, of Albany died in Ottumwa, Iowa, on the 11th of September, aged 78 years. She returned to Iowa from this state a few weeks before her death.

A Newport correspondent says: The work on the jetty is progressing well. The sand fills on either side as fast as the mattresses and rock are placed in position, solidifying the whole, and giving the best possible evidence of stability and permanence.

Articles of incorporation were filed on the 9th ult. with the secretary of state, incorporating the Calvary Presbyterian Church of Independence. Capital stock, $1200. Incorporators: Anthony Simpson, Wm. Riddle and H. I. Godley. Also Tangent Grange, No. 7, P. of H. of Tangent, Linn county. Capital stock, $60. Incorporators: Robt. L. Smith, John Harper and J. A. McGill.

Southern Oregon.

The tax rate of Curry county is 30 mills on the dollar, for the current year.

The Oakland city assessor's roll shows $115,[illegible] worth of property within the city limits.

Cheney and Bissell, gardeners in Goose Lake valley, exhibited lately in Lakeview the following samples of the vegetable products of that region: One egg turnip measured twenty-nine inches in circumference and weighed ten and a half pounds; one cabbage of the flat Dutch variety measured forty-seven inches in circumference and weighed twenty pounds. Three beets of as many different varieties, weighed respectively six, seven and eight pounds. One parsnip measured twenty-seven inches in length; onions from one to two pounds apiece with carrots and other vegetables of equally astonishing proportions. These vegetables are not damaged in the least from overgrowth, but just as tender and savory as the smaller ones.

Washington Territory.

There are thirteen prisoners awaiting trial in the jail at Walla Walla.

Fifty head out of a drove of 350 horses were drowned while fording Snake river at the mouth of the Grand Ronde a few days since.

A bridge is to be built across the Touchet ten miles below Prescott which will require about 40,000 feet of material. This will be shipped on the cars to Prescott and hauled the remaining ten miles.

J. B. Huntington, formerly largely interested in cattle growing in eastern Washington, has sold his ranch and all his cattle in the territory except about twenty thoroughbreds to Ben Snipes. He will take his reserve band to Burnt river, in Baker county, where he has about 1000 head of cattle and a large band of horses.

The wharves, lumber and ship yards, machine shops mills and booms at Port Gamble occupy fifteen acres. The common tides rise to fourteen feet there. The extreme high tides are eighteen feet. The towns and mills are supplied with pure water. The saw logs are peeled. The lengths of lumber sawed there are from 20 to 140 feet.

Klickitat landing now has a warehouse that will hold 1200 sacks of wheat, and if necessary the material is on hand to double its capacity. The large and substantial wharf boat which has been lying just across the Columbia is now moored at Klickitat landing, in charge of Mr. Lyle who will make both warehouse and wharf boat charges very reasonable.

Johnson's mill was taken down and hauled to Ellensburg upon completion of his tie contract, where it will be stored away for the winter. Where it will be next set up or at what kind of work will probably depend much upon the movements of railroad men. About 25,000 of the ties cut by him have been floated down the Yakima, and the balance are on the bank.

The Dakota, on her last down trip from the Sound took ten tons of pump logs from Olympia, 610 tons of barrel material and 434 bales hops at Tacoma; 200 half barrels salmon, 15,000 feet of lumber, 700 sacks of oats, 15 dry hides, 90 green hides, 55 bales of hops, 200 tons barrel material, 7 bales sheep skins, 2 bales of deer skins and 6 tons general merchandise from Seattle.

The hop houses on the Walker place, Puyallup, were burned on the night of the 28th ult. The buildings were insured for $300, which will cover more than half the loss on them. The hops in the kiln and cooling room were not insured. The loss on hops to E. Meeker will be about $500. The bulk of the crop, valued at $6000, was insured and lay in the warehouse about one hundred feet distant. They were saved by turning a stream of water upon the building from a force pump provided for such contingencies. The cause of the fire is unknown.

An Open Secret.
The facts are well understood that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT is by far the best external known for man or beast. The reason why becomes an "open secret" when we explain that "Mustang" penetrates skin, flesh and muscle to the very bone, removing all disease and soreness. No other liniment does this, hence no other is so largely used or does such worlds of good.

THE "OREGONIAN" MAN'S OBSERVATIONS IN DOUGLAS COUNTY.

The Best Wool-Growing Section of the Pacific Coast—The Wheat Interest—Climate, Population, Property Values, Etc., Etc.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE OREGONIAN.)

ROSEBURG, Sept 17

If my memory serves, I made some unkind remarks in a former letter about any man who was too nice to enjoy a stage ride—a stage ride of the old sort, big coach, six horses, dandy driver sat on the box etc. I wish to retract. With experience I have gained wisdom, with wisdom comes humility. In the dust of repentance I beg pardon of the thousands whom I have wronged. The ride back from Jacksonville to Roseburg had all the romantic accompaniments, but after an hour or two I was ready to quit. There seemed to be something vicious in the continued bucking of the coach as it swung swiftly around corners, and over mountain steeps. It was like falling down stairs on the installment plan. But still, there's nothing mean about a stage. If any difference occurs between it and its passenger, it always meets him half way toward a readjustment, and always with a cordiality and lack of ceremony which goes to one's soul, via the spinal column. But there are some entertaining circumstances along the route. The talk of the driver to his teams and about them is a thing altogether of itself and with a fine humor of its own. In the names of the horses one can read their temper and characteristics. "Conkling" was a fractious leader who needed constant discipline, and his mate, a magnificent brown mare, was significantly named "Kate." An old raw-boned wheeler was called "Denis Kearney," and thus through the whole political calendar. The saints of heaven—that is the more prominent ones—the wise men of antiquity and most of the abstract evils are personated in the teams of the Oregon & California Stage Company. But I started to write of

DOUGLAS COUNTY.

This shire covers an area of 3500 square miles and is of irregular shape—somewhat resembling a horse's hoof with toe to the east, ball to the south and that part which corresponds to the human ankle to the north and west, extending to the ocean. It is bounded on its entire northern border by Lane county, touches Lake with its eastern toe, reaches across the northern borders of Jackson, Josephine and a little piece of Curry on the south, covers the eastern and northern sides of Coos on the southwest and has twenty-five miles of ocean front on the west, with a good schooner harbor at the mouth of the Umpqua river. The Umpqua with its tributaries—Looking Glass, Calapooia, Elk creeks, Smith river, and many other small streams—drains the county to its extreme limits and intersects its rolling surface with rich valleys. A very small proportion of the area of Douglas is adapted to agriculture. To adopt the Irishman's way of putting it—this is probably one of the many lies for which our Irish friends must endure the laugh—the whole county is a beautiful prairie and its too bad that its filled up with hills. There is much good farming land, but the greater part of the surface is rolling and hilly. It is a shepherd's paradise. I doubt if in all the world there is a section of country better adapted to sheep than Douglas county.

The products of the county are grain of all kinds, wool, every sort of vegetable that grows in a temperate climate, hops and fruit. Apples grow in greatest abundance and are of the finest flavor. Plums, peas and cherries can be raised in any quantity, peaches grow a poor crop, corn, is "only average," potatoes and all root crops are great.

This assessment is not more than one-half of the actual value of property in the aggregate. The county indebtedness is $13,000, which will be paid this year from the regular income. The tax rate for all purposes is 20 mills.

The county officers are:

Judge—C. Gaddis.
Sheriff—F. P. Hogan.
Clerk—T. R. Sheridan.
Treasurer—W. T. Wright.
Superintendent of Schools—J. W. Strange.
Surveyor—H. G. Hurlburt.
Coroner—Wm. McBee.
Commissioners—J. M. Dillard and Abner Riddle.

The county is republican by about 175 majority, though the people have a habit in county contests of voting for the best man which often gives local offices to democrats. To this rule Mr. T. R. Sheridan, the very efficient county clerk, owes his election.

The climate of Douglas is between that of Jackson county and the Willamette valley. From the records of Mr. R. R. Rogers, sergeant signal corps, in charge of the Roseburg station, I got the facts for the following table:

GRAIN AND FRUIT.

Last year Douglas county shipped 1300 car loads or 260,000 centals of wheat. It is yet too early to get reports upon this season's crop, but it is thought that the export surplus will go a little above last year's figures. Many farmers were discouraged by the low prices of last season and many grain fields were turned into pastures; but better crops compensated for reduced acreage. Farmers in Douglas cannot afford to raise wheat for prices which pay the Willamette valley farmer very well. The freight rate from Roseburg and the stations immediately north is $60 per car load of ten tons, and the cost of hauling to Roseburg from the wheat district south is very heavy. I met one man who hauled five thousand bushels of wheat last year twenty-five miles to warehouse at Roseburg. Grain must of course bring good prices to pay these high rates and leave any profit for the producer. This will never be a great grain growing section. There are too many hills and too few valleys.

About forty thousand pounds of dried apples, and plums were shipped last year from the various towns along the railroad in this county. The Plummer machine is in general use. If the demand and prices for dried fruits were good, the export from this county would be very large, and in a few years the business would assume great proportions; but prices are low and sales are slow and uncertain. Some little shipments of fresh fruits, melons etc., are sent to the Portland market, but the business is small and unimportant.

WOOL GROWING AND OTHER INDUSTRIES.

Last year, 1,000,000 pounds of wool was shipped from Douglas county. Almost every farmer has a band of sheep, and many engage in the business of wool growing on a large scale. The stile hills which are not adapted to cultivation afford fine pasturage and sheep thrive most of the year without food, yielding both in the spring and fall a fine fleece which brings a higher price than wool grown in any other section of the Pacific coast. Wool from the Umpqua readily commands an advance of from one to three cents per pound over the product from the same kind of sheep on the Willamette valley range. The advantages of this section for wool growing are broad range of just such grasses and shrubs as are suited to sheep, a climate which allows fall as well as spring shearing, and the general "open" character of the winters. The great disadvantage is the distance from place of general market and shipment and consequent heavy freight charges. It costs 73 cents per hundred pounds to ship wool by rail from Roseburg to Portland. Notwithstanding this heavy tax, the wool grower of the Umpqua has a big percentage over his competitor of the Willamette valley. Here sheep are bred for wool and not for mutton as in many other localities, and the finest blood of stock (generally of the Merino family) may be seen on every hill-side. The spring clip is about 60 per cent of the yearly product.

There are half-a-dozen or more small saw mills in the eastern and middle parts of Douglas which saw sufficient timber for the local trade, and make some finishing lumber for export. The business is small, however. Several flouring mills do the local grinding but nothing more.

Last year about forty car loads of live stock and 27,000 sheep were sold outside of the county, sales in both instances representing the increase above home consumption. The cattle found their way to the butcher stalls at Portland and the sheep were driven into Nevada.

Shipment of chickens, eggs, poultry, etc. etc. to the Portland market is regular but it is impossible to give figures as the business is in many hands and no records kept.

On Monday I shall take stage at Drain's station for the coast for Coos bay and en route will pass through the lower Umpqua valley and the historic town of Scottsburg. Of this western part of the county, of the city of Roseburg and other general matters of interest I shall write from Gardiner.

Working Butter.

[From the Maryland Farmer.]

The working of butter is a manipulation that requires the utmost skill, for overworking destroys the grain of the product, and any motion of the "worker" that produces grinding should be avoided; and to detect this and correct it takes a quick eye and steady hand. The chief purpose in working butter is to solidify it and at the same time expel the remaining buttermilk and thoroughly diffuse the salt through the mass; and this last should be done with as little mixing as will exactly accomplish the requirement, for the grain of the salt cutting the globules of the butter, injures the grain of the latter, and the butter becomes waxy. The butter should never exceed the temperature of 60 degrees when worked, as a higher point causes the butter to gravitate towards stickiness, and when worked at too low a point the butter becomes mealy and the texture is destroyed.

If at the last working there is additional salt required care must be taken that the butter has become dry, so that it will not be dissolved, but many dairymen throw a few quarts of water into the "worker" at this stage to aid in dissolving the salt and carry with it the particles of buttermilk that have remained over from the previous working.

There is a mistaken notion in regard to salt according to the keeping quality of butter. The long keeping Danish butter perfectly worked, but never receiving a particle of salt, proves the latter is no, so far as it relates to the keeping of butter, a preservative agent, and that no amount of salt will keep butter unless certain rules are observed and requirements met. The papers teem with notices of butter preservatives and inventions to keep butter indefinitely, but it will probably be a long time before any of them will come into general use, and for years to come the long keeping butter will be found to be an article made from cream, where perfect cleanliness was observed in obtaining it and the butter churned and put into packages under a system of rules relating to age of cream, temperature and working.

The Chicago Markets.

CHICAGO, Sept 1.—Bulk meats are easier. Coffee unchanged. Business for the past week has been considerably interrupted in Chicago and other cities of the northwest by the day of mourning for the president, and business has been more completely blotted out of financial and commercial history in this section than ever before recorded. Clearings for five days reach fifty millions. Business among jobbers is animated, and there has been a substantial gain over prices and sales of a year ago. Groceries, like all other kinds of living material, notably flour, potatoes, dairy products and vegetables, are strong, and if not actually higher, give promise of advance in the near future. Grocers talk discouragingly to housekeepers of higher prices, and at the retail stores their predictions meet almost daily confirmation. It is becoming a serious matter to people whose wages are not heavier than a year or two ago how they can make both ends meet with all living expenses advancing rapidly. Coal is going up, rent is a third higher and some of the table expenses more than doubled, yet with this serious problem confronting the citizens they see a gradual advance in cereals and provisions on 'change, which seems due not to any corner, clique or manipulation, but to the strong and abiding faith of speculators, farmers and dealers in the value of the fruit of the soil.

Wheat experienced a boom of nearly 8 cents. The corn market was next with a rise of 5 cents, and oats were not far behind with a rise of 4¼ cents. In each case the lowest price was recorded Tuesday and the highest to-day.

There was great irregularity in options, which sometimes ran parallel for a few hours and then diverged widely from each other. Failures and rumors of failures caused a sensation toward the close but markets went steadily upward in spite of every adverse influence.

Provisions were fairly steady without any great disturbance in values, although the tendency was downward.

Sales October option were made as follows: Wheat, $1 34@1 31¼; corn, 69 4@74¼; oats, 43@44¼; pork, $18 80@19 45; lard, 13¼@12½. Prices for grain are the highest for many years, and higher than for ten years, excepting cases of well developed corners.

One of the amusing features of the deal is that some of the more enthusiastic members of the Cincinnati syndicate who secured such handsome profits by bulling August wheat, have been badly bitten at their own game and see now short themselves on October wheat, and are suffering the result. A majority of the clique are believed to have pulled out with their profits.

Chicago receipts this week were as follows: Flour, 80,000 bbls, wheat, 267,000 bushels, corn, 2,801,000 bushels, oats, 337,000 bushels. Shipments: Flour, 72,000, wheat, 240,000, corn, 1,428,000, oats, 482,000.

Receipts for same time last year: Flour, 58,000, wheat, 629,000, corn, 3,152,000, oats, 887,000. Shipments: Flour, 48,000, wheat, 618,000, corn, 2,206,-000; oats, 742,000.

Except flour the receipts this year are less than last, but they are far in excess of the shipments, the corn receipts being double. The elevators are pretty well filled, and there is no outlook for emptying them.

THE FAMOUS OPERA SINGERS.

Annie Louise Cary and Clara Louise Kellogg are beyond question the most famous opera singers of modern times. In fact they have been acknowledged to be the leaders of their profession, as well as ladies of large experience and particularly good taste. They have probably traveled more extensively than any ladies on the stage and as a consequence have had excellent opportunities of judging of the merits of different countries and their productions. It is certainly a very great credit to California and the balmy semi-tropical climate of the Pacific to have had them pronounce Steven's Yosemite Cologne by far the best they have ever used in any country. For sale by Woodward, Clarke & Co., Portland, Oregon.

Scarcely any disease to which human beings are subjected is so thoroughly discouraging as Fever and Ague. The periodical return of alternate chills, fever and sweating is terribly depressing. Ayer's Ague Cure is the only remedy known which is certain to cure permanently, by expelling the malarial poison which produces the disease. It does this surely, and leaves no ill effect upon the system.

THE EASTERN FREIGHT SITUATION.

NEW YORK, Oct 1.—The freight market still shows lack of activity and ships are only doing fair business. The Armenia, of Van Vleck's line, finished to-day while the Chas. Dennis will take at next week. Rates remain very steady and there are prospects of advance, especially for dead weights within a short time. Tonnage is not plenty, but lines have enough under engagement till November, when it is probable they will secure sufficient to carry them over to the close of the year. There have been no new charters for the Pacific and the only one for the Pacific is the British ship S. H. Morris with a cargo of coal from Baltimore to Acapulco for Pacific Mail S. S. Co.

Railroad freights are quite active and shipments aggregate very large, including 800 cs coal oil, 1000 cs turpentine, 42 bxs soap, 250 bxs lemons, cases sauce, 1 cs pickled fish, 744 pkgs tobacco, 18 cases canned goods, 14 cs sardines, 20 bbls currants, 40 bxs pepper sauce, 15 bgs coffee and 24 coils rope.

Isthmus freights are dull. Nothing is doing out side of contracts for shipments.

At Boston the freight market is more active. The Goodell has finished and the Sintram, to follow, is in berth. Railroad freights at Boston are also active with shipments of 765 pkgs fish, 6 cs yeast powders, 900 cs canned goods, 270 cs coal oil, 150 kgs horse shoes.

At Philadelphia the freight market is rather quiet, although there is more doing than a few weeks since. The Jane Fish is nearly loaded and ought to sail in a few days.

45 Years Before the Public.

THE GENUINE

CELEBRATED

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

King of the Blood

Is not a "cure all." It is a blood purifier and tonic. Impurity of blood poisons the system, deranges the circulation, and thus induces many disorders, known by different names to distinguish them according to effects, but being really branches or phases of that great generic disorder, Impurity of Blood. Such are Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Nervous Disorders, Headache, Backache, General Weakness, Heart Disease, Dropsy, Kidney Disease, Piles, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Skin Disorders, Pimples, Ulcers, Swellings, &c., &c. King of the Blood prevents and cures these by attacking the cause, Impurity of the blood. [illegible] calling it "the most genuine and efficient preparation for the purpose." Sold by Druggists, $1 per bottle. See testimonials, directions, &c., in pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," wrapped around each bottle. D. RANSOM, SON & CO., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

such as SPERMATORRHŒA, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring, either directly or indirectly, from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance and permit those diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organizations broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances.
